Social Policy and Practice is a unique bibliographic database for those working or studying in the social and health care sectors. SPP is a vital source of relevant evidence, produced by UK-based organisations which play an active role in guiding practitioners and policy-makers.

SPP helps professional, practitioners, researchers and students to understand, plan and evaluate existing and future social policy. It is used widely by organisations from the public, private and third sectors, as well as by universities and colleges, and the database has been identified by NICE as a key resource for those involved in research into health and social care.

SPP provides fast access to vital evidence and research information, from books and journals as well as many reports - from national and regional government departments, public agencies, local authorities, third-sector organisations, consultancy and professional bodies, academic think-tanks and research departments.

SPP brings together information from five of the UK's leading collections of social policy and practice resources:

- AgeInfo - Centre for Policy on Ageing
- NSPCC - National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children
- Planex - IDOX Information Service
- Social Care Online - Social Care Institute for Excellence (SCIE)
- Child Data - National Children's Bureau (NCB) (to January 2018)

SPP also includes material from the Greater London Authority.

About 30% of the total content is hard-to-find report literature; most references have direct links to full text.

Social Policy and Practice contains over 400,000 bibliographic records and abstracts dating from 1981, with over 24,000 new records added every year. Its customised Abstracts and Indexing help ensure that users can find the information they're looking for, and that they can easily assess the relevance of each item to their inquiry.

Social Policy and Practice helps you:

- Support evidence-based approaches to the health and social assessment of children, adults and older people in the community and in care
